Some kinds of this work is recommended above all others, and needs but an inspection to prove its superiority for cleanliness, durability and life-like appearance to any artificial teeth in use.

None but the most permanent and finished operations performed, and no inducements to patients by low priced or roughly finished operations. Miscellaneous Paragraphs.

There was a time when the public was satisfied to be told that it was all quiet along the Potomac. That was when the Union troops were being disciplined. There was a time when the public was glad that Washington was safe. That was before the Government had material to equip its armies.—There was a time when we were pleased to learn that we only lost two or three field-batteries and a few thousand prisoners. That was during the reign of fancy brigadiers. Now the public is not satisfied if it is quiet along the Potomac. They want Richmond to be put in danger, and do not want to lose any arms or prisoners.

Many ideas may be expressed which, if plainly spoken, are only coarse; but which, when too tenderly handled, become nasty.

Senator Latham said at Marysville that one hundred and seventy-five Brigadier-Generals, out of two hundred in the army, are Democrats. The same is probably the proportion of the Major-Generals. Yet, there are some scrub-politicians who lyingly proclaim that Mr. Lincoln is animated by partisan feelings in making military appointments.

Mr. Chas. H. Westmoreland is announced as one of the editors of the Marysville Appeal, in one of the columns of that journal.

An actor by the name of W. H. Leighton is now undergoing an overhauling by the California press. He was in New Orleans at the commencement of the war, and joined a military organization there to maintain treason and rend the Union. He is an Englishman.

A good story is told of a hard-shell missionary in Medina, who had become mixed up in land speculations in Minnesota. On entering his pulpit recently, he announced to his congregation, at the opening of his sermon, that his text might be found in St. Paul's epistle to the Minnesotians, section fourth, range three, west!

The Government is now engaged in clearing the harbor of Norfolk of the hulks of the men-of-war which were sunk in it, at the time of its capture by the Confederates. The old frigate United States has been raised already.

Thurlow Weed is going to Europe on another mission, at the instigation of the Government. His special duties are to watch the treacherous conduct of the British in building ships for the Confederates, and to confer with the Russian Czar on matters of mutual national interest.

OUR SIDE.—A writer in the September number of McMillan's Magazine, an English publication, gives his views of what he saw, which differ materially from those of the puppy-faced weak-eyed snobs, who do the American articles for the London Times:

> "It seems to me, on coming back, that what I recollect, or fancy I recollect must be a delusion of the mind. I saw a country rich, prosperous and powerful, and am told that I have just returned from a ruined, bankrupt and wretched land. I saw a people eager for war, full of hope, and confident of success; and am told that this same people has no heart in the matter, and longs for foreign interference to secure peace at any price. I saw great principles at stake, great questions at issue, and learn that in this struggle there is no principle involved. There are matters of opinion, in which I may be mistaken; but so much I do know for a fact, that I saw vast armies, composed of as fine regiments as the Old World could show—not Irish nor German, but native born Americans; that I came across the track of great battles, and saw only by too palpable an evidence, how bloody and how hard fought had been this contest; that I know, too, myself, of hundreds and thousands who have left home and family, and business to risk their lives for the cause so dear to them. And then, I am still informed that I must be mistaken, because it is notorious that Americans do not fight at all, that their soldiers are hired mercenaries, and that such qualities as courage or love of country do not exist in America."

RETAKEN.—One of the captives of the massacre at Salmon Falls has been recovered. The Oregon Statesman of December 23d contains the following particulars:

> By a letter addressed to a friend from a former workman in this office, who is now in one of the California Infantry companies, we learn that one of the Van Norman boys, captured in the Fall of 1860, on the Oregon emigrant road, was taken recently, from the Snake Indians, by a detachment of Cavalry, under Major McGarey, at a place about one hundred miles North of Camp Douglas. He has been taken charge of by his uncle.

Gen Fremont was removed from the command of the Army of the West just as he was about to engage the enemy Gen McClellan was first removed from the command of the Army of the Potomac after he had repeatedly tried to defeat them A second trial of Gen Fremont's qualities did not alter the opinion which the majority of the people of the Union had formed of him a second trial of Gen McClellan's abilities only confirmed the general opinion of the incurable defect of his character—an incurable cautiousness without the craftiness which makes extreme caution an endurable military quality Gen Fremont, being out of office, had abundant time to criticise the conduct of other generals and plan reprisals against his rivals Gen McClellan has not yet manifested [illegible] intention to do any such a thing so here the resemblance in the fortunes of the two Generals [illegible]

There are two classes of men who are striving to make capital out of the fortunes or misfortunes of these two men There are two classes of men who spend ten words of commiseration for these men, where they have one for their distracted country, or one word of praise for the valiant rank and file who are being slaughtered by thousands each week The people of the New England States are the chief backers of Fremont. They know but little about him In California, where he is well known, in the West, where he is even better estimated, the people hate John C Fremont—no milder term will suffice McClellan is personally popular everywhere but among some extreme men in the East This is perhaps deserved Out of the troubles that arise from the failures of these men, much political capital is made; not because those who praise or blame care anything about the men but because they want an excuse to influence the minds of the people against the Government.

This is nothing but an old scheme revivified and made to do service again During the Anti-Mason excitement in New York, the leaders of the Anties made a great ado over one Morgan, who, it was said, the Masons had secretly made away with When it was shown to these men that Morgan was not murdered, they were careful to keep it from the people "He is a good enough cat's-paw for us" said these old political strategists Ever since that time, "Good enough Morgan" has meant that any lie or misrepresentation was good enough as long as it answered the purpose of blinding the people. The two Generals mentioned are the Morgans for two political parties The leaders of each of those parties are equally anxious to make capital out of them, equally careless of the true interests of the country and both are indifferent about the two men any farther than they may be turned to account. As Orpheus C Kerr says "When cats and politicians quarrel, 'use any cat's paw' is the moral"

No man can be patriotic who does not wish that both those Generals had been successful no man can be patriotic who devotes much time to lamenting their misfortunes, when their country demands all their sympathies Fremont and McClellan will pass away, the country will yet remain

Soldier s Clothing

The immense amount of clothing and other Government property required for the national armies, has compelled Government to adopt stringent measures to prevent its going out of the proper hands The military officers throughout the country are ordered to see to this matter in the most effectual manner We are requested to publish the following Order, and the section of the law of Congress upon which it is based

General Orders, No. 160.

WAR DEPARTMENT ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE
Washington October 22d 186[illegible]

It appearing that large quantities of Government property have been unlawfully disposed of by non-commissioned officers and soldiers, in violation of law and of the Army rules and regulations, it is therefore ordered That all United States officers commanding posts shall seize all military clothing, blankets shoes, arms equipments and other such supplies, which have been issued by the Government to soldiers, and lost or disposed of by them And it shall be upon about an any person not a soldier who may have any such property in his possession to prove that he has lawfully acquired possession thereof

Such property, when seized, will be turned over to a United States Quartermaster and his receipt in duplicate taken therefor, one of such receipts to be transmitted to the Quartermaster General The seizure will also be reported to the Adjutant General

All Provost Marshals appointed by the Department will assist in recovering to the United States this description of public property

Commanding officers of companies are reminded that it is their duty not only to cause soldiers who are guilty of violating the law forbidding the sale, destruction or negligent loss of clothing, arms, and public property to be charged on the Muster Rolls with all the articles improperly lost or improperly disposed of but also to enforce such other punishment as the nature of their offence may demand

By order of the Secretary of War
L THOMAS, Adjutant General

EXTRACT FROM ACT OF CONGRESS, APPROVED MARCH 16 1802

Section 1[illegible] And be it further enacted, That every person who shall procure or entice a soldier in the service of the United States to desert or who shall purchase from any soldier his arms, uniform clothing or any part thereof and every captain or commanding officer of any ship or vessel, who shall enter on board such ship or vessel as one of his crew knowing him to have deserted or otherwise carry away any such soldier or shall refuse to deliver him up to the orders of his commanding officer shall upon legal conviction, be fined at the discretion of any court having cognizance of the same in any sum not exceeding three hundred dollars or be imprisoned any term not exceeding one year

In the matter of the contested claim between E H Barron and the City of Walla Walla, for the south west quarter of the south west quarter of section 20, the Register and Receiver have decided in favor of the city

Branch of the Overland Mail

The communication published [illegible] has been written [illegible] concerning the [illegible] branch of the Great Overland Mail to supply the wants of the people [illegible] upon the tributaries of the Columbia river. It will be [illegible] that Mr Crawford has an unfavorable opinion of the road [illegible] Powder river Valley [illegible] We will continue to publish [illegible] light on the [illegible] this [illegible]

[illegible] Walla Walla [illegible] Rocks [illegible] grass [illegible] From this point [illegible] creek [illegible] From [illegible] miles [illegible] Swamp [illegible] miles [illegible] grass can be had [illegible] miles to Pole creek [illegible] this stream grass can be [illegible] although [illegible] four miles from here [illegible] Snake river [illegible] good camping place [illegible] distance [illegible] last named point [illegible] grass can be obtained [illegible] miles to the Bruneau river [illegible] most part of the distance [illegible] river The [illegible] bottoms of Bruneau river afford plenty of fine grass and would be a desirable point for a station Twenty five miles from this point the road passes Burnt Mountain creek and twenty five miles farther it strikes Snake river at the Old Iron crossing Plenty of good grass can be found [illegible] hills [illegible] The road for the last fifty miles is [illegible] sandy [illegible] rocky Eight miles from this place plenty of grass can be had at Current creek From here it is thirty six miles to the Owyhee river where plenty of all the necessaries for a station may be found [illegible] from Old Iron spring to this place is [illegible] sandy [illegible] and consequently heavier for teams It is seventeen miles of heavy [illegible] to the Malheur river where plenty of grass may be had From this river to Burnt [illegible] it is thirteen miles, and nineteen miles [illegible] there to Burnt river the road [illegible] part being sandy and rocky From this point it is eighteen miles to Hawthorn creek and thirty to Powder river valley—the road leading up Burnt river, up Hawthorn creek crossing the head of Burnt river and over a divide to the Powder river valley The road is easier for teams but harder for wagons for the whole distance

As the public are generally acquainted with the road from Powder river to Walla Walla I need not say more on that subject

As to the practicability of this route or staging I would say that it is possible for a line of stages to be run over this road, but it would require an immense outlay of both energy and money The country through which the road runs is entirely free from timber of a size sufficient for buildings and the road is covered with from two to eight inches of an alkaline dust which is in many instances fatal to stock These difficulties together with the long distances between a sufficiency of grass and water, combine to make this particular road, to my mind, entirely impracticable as a stage route

Very truly yours
LE ROY CRAWFORD

WALLA WALLA NEWS—We have files of the Walla Walla Statesman to the 20th of December

The Statesman says of the division question. "The only agitation that has ever been made of this subject has sprung from one source alone, and we venture the assertion that there are not fifty intelligent permanent settlers east of the mountains who would to day vote for the division of the Territory as proposed by the few who have advocated it We know that the people of Walla Walla county are almost a unit against it and we have the assurance of intelligent men from the upper counties that there are but few there who advocate it. We have the plans of the few political hucksters who are thus prematurely agitating this scheme and if we did not know that the popular vote was so strongly against their policy, we would give them a passing notice

Oats and barley command six [illegible] per pound in Walla Walla, and are scarce

In speaking of Mr Lincoln's proposition to have the gold mines scientifically explored, the Statesman says that the only kind of exploration that is worth [illegible] must be done with a pick and shovel.

PORTLAND [illegible] ments g[illegible] the wrong place. [illegible] a good deal of experiment [illegible] the right place without accomplishing it. Some years since they got Portland between two fires—St Helens below and Milwaukie above. But neither proved to be the right place. There was La Roche. "Never heard of La Roche," says a new-comer. Probably not, but there are those here who have heard of it at a time when it was considered the right place. If you were now to look for it and ask where to find it, echo would answer where? There is Willamette City—a printer, yes sir, a poor printer even, monopolises the valuable town plat of that once flourishing place. He uses it for a calf pasture or something of that sort. Look at Milwaukie—view her mouldering ruins—fit emblem of overleaping ambition. None of these are the right places. "Then St Helens must be the place," says another. Sir we tell you that you may stick ocean steamers on Swan Island bar when there is thirty feet of water on it and it will not make St Helens the place. It has been tried and can't win. Astoria must be the place or Vancouver or Oregon City or in fact any where but Portland. It is strange that nobody spends any money on the supposition of some of these places becoming the place.—There are those who are continually wondering why the business of the country does not go somewhere beside Portland. They mostly say "God never intended this to be the place." He has then had his intentions very strongly opposed, we think.

SPORTS OF THE SEASON.—When Christmas comes people will get drunk. Preach against it as you may, the day is made an excuse for drunkenness. Fighting follows as a matter of course, although it is difficult to say whether men fight because they are drunk or get drunk in order to fight. A number of gentlemen who were indulging in sprees on Christmas Eve, were brought to grief on Christmas day. George Simpson violated City Ordinance No 10, by being drunk and disorderly at the time named, and although the testimony of officer Brannan was to the contrary, he plead not guilty. An unavailing plea, for the Recorder fined him $10 and costs, which he paid to avoid going to jail. Wm Hamlin knew that Marshal Grooms knew that he, William, was drunk on Christmas Eve, consequently he knew it would do no good to plead not guilty, and maybe felt conscientious about it any how, so he acknowledged that he was guilty of the offence. He was fined $5 or 3 days. He chose the latter. Mick Smith had been drunk, but was sober, and sensible, and was fined $5 or 3 days, choosing the three days as his portion. Burnham & Short are not partners, but fighters. They had a discussion with revolvers involving the beating of each other over the head. They were fortunately prevented from entirely killing each other, and being arraigned before the Recorder, they both plead guilty and were fined $10 apiece or 5 days. Neither of them being possessed of the financial requisites, they were both sent up for the time named. We would suggest that gentlemen who are capable of keeping revolvers ought to have money enough to see themselves through any little trouble such as is named, or the trifling enjoyment of killing a man occasionally.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE.—In our advertising columns will be found a notice of an extensive sale of real estate at auction. The property is held under the undisputed title derived from Finice Caruthers, deceased. The land lies on the plateau East and South of Mount Robinson, and is susceptible of economical improvement. From any part of it a fine view of the business part of the town and the approaches to town by water, can be had. The best view of the scenery of the Cascades which can be had from any part of the town plat is from the lands here offered for sale. Mounts Hood and St Helens, and the Southern continuation of the Cascades Range, are seen over the timber East of the Willamette from base to summit. An abundant supply of spring water is easily obtained from the flowage of Mount Robinson. Taken altogether, the lands are among the most desirable in the vicinity of the City, and at no distant day must appreciate greatly in value. The total comprises seventeen blocks, fractional blocks and blocks with fractional additions, lying on the Southern extremity of the City, on South Fifth, Sixth and Seventh streets, containing 26 69 acres. Mr. Mansfield, the Auctioneer will meet bidders on the ground at 10 A M, precisely, and no delay will be had in proceeding with the sale. As the sale may be protracted, refreshments will be brought to the ground.

Mr. Mansfield will also sell to-morrow at 1½ P M two valuable lots on Front street between Estes & Co's Mill and the Penitentiary. These belong to the estate of Dr. H Lownsdale, and the terms of sale will be made known on the ground. The auctioneer will meet bidders for the last named property at the Court House at 1 P M and proceed from thence to the ground.

SHOOTING MATCH.—The shooting match below town, day before yesterday, was much interrupted by a free fight, which was raised by some ill-conditioned persons. Unfortunately, none of them were badly hurt.

VERY WRONG.—The Commercial notices the bad conduct of some persons who were present at the midnight ceremonies at the Catholic Church, the night before Christmas. We have no personal knowledge of the circumstances, but will say that a genteel kicking is not too bad for any man who will interfere with the religious services of any denomination. The Catholics are noted for their respect for religion under all its forms.

Columbian No 3.—There will be a Special Meeting of your Company this (Saturday) evening at seven o'clock.

A Mountaineer's Wedding.

(Concluded.)

On entering the house we found Miss Sally Haines and Mr. John Moore sitting in chairs placed side by side, and looking very comical and restless. Standing immediately behind them were Buck Bradley and a blushing beauty, the latter looking for all the world as if, contrary to her expectations, she had just been chosen bridesmaid. Buck held his ribboned and bachelor's buttoned bottle in his hand, and seemed to feel every inch of his importance and standing.

Silence, awfully profound, with the exception of a few sniggles and twitters from the different parts of the room, reigned over the scene for the space of five minutes, perhaps, when 'Squire Haines got up and said:

"Rise to your feet."

Our candidates for matrimony obeyed the mandate.

"Mr. John Moore," he continued, "do you take this here woman to be your lawful and wedded wife?"

"Yes," replied John.

"Miss Sally, do you take this fel—ahem! this man to be your lawful and wedded husband?"

"Yes, sir—ahem!"

"I pronounce you man and wife. Take your seats."

At this juncture some one ran up and whispered into the already embarrassed 'squire's ear, whereupon he said:

"Ahem! I forgot—get up agin a minute—ahem!"

They arose with great rapidity, after which the 'squire went on:

"If thar's any here that knows anythin' why these two shouldn't be married, let 'em say so now or allers hold their peace.—That's all I b'lieve."

And the 'squire paused. Another whisper in his ear, and he went on:

"Oh, yes—salute your bride."

John saluted his bride, and then came Buck Bradley's part of the ceremony, which was commenced by passing the bottle, ribbons, bachelor's buttons and all, into the hands of the bride. She pressed its corkless mouth to her lips, and in the operation took a little of the amber-colored liquid; meanwhile Buck was pressing his lips to those of the beautiful bridesmaid. Having swallowed the amber-colored liquid, Sally tore the bachelor's buttons from the flask, to show that John was no longer to be regarded as a bachelor; she then handed it to him. He acquainted himself with its contents, and then tore off the ribbons to indicate that Sally's days for gaudy display had ceased to be; and while this was going on the bridesmaid kissed Buck, or rather, returned the kiss that he had given her while Sally was saluting the bottle.

The flask now minus its decorations and minus some of its contents, passed from the hands of John to those of the bridesmaid. She took a moderate sip and passed it to Buck. Buck tasted and passed it to his nearest neighbor, and from thence away it went among the guests, from hand to hand, and from mouth to mouth, regardless of age or sex, untill every drop of the amber-colored liquid was gone and the bottle was empty. This was called drinking a health to the young folks, and after it came kissing the bride, and then the marriage ceremony was over.

The newly married folks resumed their positions in the chairs the same as before the ceremony, and we "youngsters" went out into the yard to wrestle, leap, pitch mauls, run foot-races, and so on, till supper was ready.

And during that little recess I managed to learn why it was that 'Squire Haines had officiated at the marriage of his own daughter. A young minister—the only one in that region—had been all attention to the said daughter; but to use a native phrase, John had proven too sharp for him and had taken the prize. This so incensed the young Demosthenes that he left the settlement on the day of the wedding, and would not, under any consideration, be induced to return. So as there was no other person within reach authorized to solemnize the rights of matrimony, 'Squire Haines had the rights of matrimony to solemnize.

In about half an hour a call was made for the "aged and middle-aged" to fill up the table. The aged and middle-aged obeyed the summons, and not a few whose number of summers placed them far below even the middle-aged, elbowed in and followed the example of older heads. But there was plenty of time, and plenty to eat, consequently all had their satisfaction of the very best the country afforded long before leaving the premises.

When "night had hung her curtains up, and pinned them with a star," the guests, with a very few exceptions, had scattered off to their respective homes. The writer of this article was one among the exceptions. By ten o'clock the laugh and the chat had died away, and a few mysterious whispers were being exchanged, when hark! —a violinist, a "solitary violinist," was playing along up the lane toward the house! The first note caused a frown to mantle the brow of 'Squire Haines, sent his hopeful son, Bill, under the bed, and induced the women folks to look as frightened as they could. The frown passed away, however, giving place to a beam of good humor, and Bill soon emerged from beneath the bed, hauling forth a large stone jug full of something that oozed out around the cob stopple—perhaps an "amber-colored liquid." The jug was deposited on the hearth, the ladies composed themselves as best they were able, and good cheer was finally restored.

Meanwhile the solitary violinist came nearer, entered the yard, passed three times around the house, and then ceased to perform. For two minutes, perhaps, all was silent as death without and within; but at the end of that time, and with a suddenness unsurpassed by the nearest clap of thunder, came a crash that shook the house from top to bottom. And this sudden crash was not the end of it, but the noise kept up without losing a single note for the space of ten minutes. Bells, tin-pans, stove-pipes, tin-horns, cow-horns, iron kettles, brass kettles, horse-fiddles, clap-boards, empty barrels with stones in them, men with gigantic voices, dogs and hogs for ought I know, commingled and sent up as a unit sounds to the full extent of their several capacities. This was a shiveree, and the shiveree-ers [illegible] thirty in number, passed round and round the house in double file until all were pretty well exhausted by their own exertions. They then formed a semi-circle in front of the door, and after a moment's [illegible] gave three hearty cheers for the bride and groom. Mr. John Moore [illegible] the next step necessary to be taken [illegible] the door and charged upon them with the jug aforenamed. They received it [illegible] with renewed cheering, [illegible] the happy bridegroom of six [illegible] upon their shoulders [illegible] marched off to the [illegible] "Wait for the waggon and we'll all take a ride," done on the fiddle [illegible] ter by a masterly musician [illegible] stump thirty or forty paces [illegible] and upon this they stood [illegible] John Moore. Having [illegible] around him, they gave another [illegible] of cheers, and then passed [illegible] hands might drink his health [illegible] done to their entire satisfaction [illegible] one took him up on their shoulders [illegible] him back to the house under the stirring influence of "Old Zip Coon," and deposited him very carefully upon the [illegible] steps, not exactly as they had received him [illegible] but minus the jug. He walked into the house, and straightway the one hundred and one discordant instruments struck up their unearthly clamor, and continued it without intermission until the bride presented herself in the door. At the sight of her each performer came suddenly to a bar of rest, and all was quiet for about one minute. At the end of that time they gave three cheers; then they drank her health all round, deposited the jug on the steps, wished her a "good night," formed into single file, struck up "Get out of the wilderness" on the violin, and marched rapidly away. And except a few distant shouts from among the mountains, and, now and then, the highest notes of a merry song, we heard no more of them.

That shiveree [illegible] all well; but it would have been otherwise had Mr. Moore failed to comply with the rules. He would have received but one set of cheers, and from thence on till morning, or nearly so, the eternal din would have been kept up. My host told me of several cases of the kind, but assured me that they were somewhat rare. The shiveree-ers were always expected, he said, and preparations were usually made to give them a friendly reception.

The Markets.

We have San Francisco commercial news to the 13th inst. The shipping demand [illegible] wheat for the Liverpool market continues, and there is also a demand [illegible] for wheat to China. We [illegible] at 4@4½ cents. The [illegible] took down ale at 6002 boxes, which will [illegible] about where they are at. The [illegible] dull; the demand being [illegible] Columbia are next to nothing. [illegible] rected up to date of publication. There are no changes of importance.

Portland, Dec 3, 1862.

A Mountaineer's Wedding.

(Concluded.)

On entering the house we found Miss Sally Haines and Mr. John Moore sitting in chairs placed side by side, and looking very comical and restless. Standing immediately behind them were Buck Bradley and a blushing beauty, the latter looking for all the world as if, contrary to her expectations, she had just been chosen bridesmaid. Buck held his ribboned and bachelor's buttoned bottle in his hand, and seemed to feel every inch of his importance and standing.

Silence, awfully profound, with the exception of a few sniggles and twitters from the different parts of the room, reigned over the scene for the space of five minutes, perhaps, when 'Squire Haines got up and said:

"Rise to your feet!"

Our candidates for matrimony obeyed the mandate.

"Mr. John Moore," he continued, "do you take this here woman to be your lawful and wedded wife?"

"Yes," replied John.

"Miss Sally, do you take this fel—ahem! this man to be your lawful and wedded husband?"

"Yes, sir—ahem!"

"I pronounce you man and wife. Take your seats."

At this juncture some one ran up and whispered into the already embarrassed 'squire's ear, whereupon he said:

"Ahem! I forgot—get up agin a minute—ahem!"

They arose with great rapidity, after which the 'squire went on:

"If thar's any here that knows anythin' why these two shouldn't be married, let 'em say so now or allers hold their peace.—That's all I b'lieve."

And the 'squire paused. Another whisper in his ear, and he went on:

"Oh! yes—salute your bride."

John saluted his bride, and then came Buck Bradley's part of the ceremony, which was commenced by passing the bottle, ribbons, bachelor's buttons and all, into the hands of the bride. She pressed its corkless mouth to her lips, and in the operation took a little of the amber-colored liquid; meanwhile Buck was pressing his lips to those of the beautiful baidesmaid. Having swallowed the amber-colored liquid, Sally tore the bachelor's buttons from the flask, to show that John was no longer to be regarded as a bachelor; she then handed it to him. He acquainted himself with its contents, and then tore off the ribbons to indicate that Sally's days for gaudy display had ceased to be; and while this was going on the bridesmaid kissed Buck, or rather, returned the kiss that he had given her while Sally was saluting the bottle.

The flask now minus its decorations and minus some of its contents, passed from the hands of John to those of the bridesmaid. She took a moderate sip and passed it to Buck. Buck tasted and passed it to his nearest neighbor, and from thence away it went among the guests, from hand to hand, and from mouth to mouth, regardless of age or sex, untill every drop of the amber-colored liquid was gone and the bottle was empty. This was called drinking a health to the young folks, and after it came kissing the bride, and then the marriage ceremony was over.

The newly married folks resumed their positions in the chairs the same as before the ceremony, and we "youngsters" went out into the yard to wrestle, leap, pitch mauls, run foot-races, and so on, till supper was ready.

And during that little recess I managed to learn why it was that 'Squire Haines had officiated at the marriage of his own daughter. A young minister—the only one in that region—had been all attention to the said daughter; but to use a native phrase, John had proven too sharp for him and had taken the prize. This so incensed the young Demosthenes that he left the settlement on the day of the wedding, and would not, under any consideration, be induced to return. So as there was no other person within reach authorized to solemnize the rights of matrimony, 'Squire Haines had the rights of matrimony to solemnize.

In about half an hour a call was made for the "aged and middle-aged" to fill up the table. The aged and middle-aged obeyed the summons, and not a few whose number of summers placed them far below even the middle-aged, elbowed in and followed the example of older heads. But there was plenty of time, and plenty to eat, consequently all had their satisfaction of the very best the country afforded long before leaving the premises.

When "night had hung her curtains up, and pinned them with a star," the guests, with a very few exceptions, had scattered off to their respective homes. The writer of this article was one among the exceptions. By ten o'clock the laugh and the chat had died away, and a few mysterious whispers were being exchanged, when hark!—a violinist, a "solitary violinist," was playing along up the lane toward the house! The first note caused a frown to mantle the brow of 'Squire Haines, sent his hopeful son, Bill, under the bed, and induced the women folks to look as frightened as they could. The frown passed away, however, giving place to a beam of good humor, and Bill soon emerged from beneath the bed, hauling forth a large stone jug full of something that oozed out around the cob stopple—perhaps an "amber-colored liquid." The jug was deposited on the hearth, the ladies composed themselves as best they were able, and good cheer was finally restored.

Meanwhile the solitary violinist came nearer, entered the yard, passed three times around the house, and then ceased to perform. For two minutes, perhaps, all was silent as death without and within; but at the end of that time, and with a suddenness unsurpassed by the nearest clap of thunder, came a crash that shook the house from top to bottom. And this sudden crash was not the end of it, but the noise kept up without losing a single note for the space of ten minutes. Bells, tin-pans, stove-pipes, tin-horns, cow-horns, iron kettles, brass kettles, horse fiddles, clap-boards, empty barrels with stones in them, men with gigantic voices, dogs and hogs for ought I know, commingled and sent up as a unit sounds to the full extent of their several capacities. This was a shiveree, and the shiveree-ers, some thirty in number, passed round and round the house in double file, until all were pretty well exhausted by their own exertions. They then formed a semi-circle in front of the door, and after a momentary silence gave three hearty cheers for the bride and groom." Mr. John Moore, [illegible] next step necessary to be taken, opened the door and charged upon them with the jug aforenamed. They received it with delight with renewed cheering, seized the happy bridegroom of [illegible], and instantly upon their shoulders [illegible] marched off to the [illegible] of "Wait for the wagon, and we'll all take a ride," done on the fiddle in a truly [illegible] by a masterly musician. To a large stump thirty or forty paces they marched, and upon this they stood the unresisting John Moore. Having formed a circle around him, they gave another instalment of cheers, and then passed the jug that all hands might drink his health. This was done to their entire satisfaction. They once more took him upon their shoulders, carried him back to the house under the stirring influence of "Old Zip Coon," and deposited him very carefully upon the door-step, not exactly as they had received him, however, but minus the jug. He walked into the house, and straightway the jug band [illegible] and one discordant instrument struck up their unearthly clamor, and continued it without intermission until the bride presented herself in the door. At the sight of her each performer came suddenly to a bar of rest, and all was quiet for about one minute. At the end of that time they gave three cheers; then they drank her health all round, deposited the jug on the steps, wished her a "good night," formed into single file, struck up "Get out of the wilderness" on the violin, and marched rapidly away. And excepting a few distant shouts from among the mountains, and, perhaps, the highest notes of a merry song, we heard no more of them.

"That shiveree went off well," but it would have been otherwise had Mr. Moore failed to comply with the rules. He would have received but one set of cheers, and from thence on till morning, or nearly so, the eternal din would have been kept up. My host told me of several cases of the kind, but assured me that they were somewhat rare. The shiveree was always expected, he said, and preparations were usually made to give them a friendly reception.

PAIN PANACEA.

Is composed entirely of healing gums, and vegetable oils and herbs. It is perfectly safe for the most delicate to use. I can most sincerely say that I have never known any, however delicate, to be injured by it in the least. I will continue to ask the afflicted, who have not used it, to try it for the following diseases. If they are not satisfied with its healing properties, the money will be cheerfully returned by the agent where the medicine is for sale.

If you have pain in the stomach or Bowels, try a dose of Pain Panacea internally, bathe externally over the parts affected, and you will at once restore the proper action of it and relieve the pain.

If you have a Bruise or Wound bathe it well with the Pain Panacea four times a day. It will relieve the pain, and take out all the poison, and heal the wound in a short time.

If you are suffering from Neuralgia or Rheumatic Pains, apply the Pain Panacea freely, and take a dose of it internally, morning, noon and night; it will not only cure the pain, but will remove the cause of the disease.

If you have the Dyspepsia, and continual distresses your stomach after eating, take a dose of Pain Panacea after each meal.

If you have a Cankered or Sore Mouth or Throat, apply the Pain Panacea to the affected parts, and gargle the mouth or throat three or four times a day.

If you have the Diarrhoea, or a relaxed state of the bowels, take a dose of Pain Panacea, and they will soon be restored. If you have a painful swelling, bathe the parts freely, and it will soon relieve pain, and the swelling will be reduced.

If you have a severe tooth-ache, apply the Pain Panacea on a piece of cotton and bathe gum at the same time. It will stop the pain instantly.

If you have a pain in the Breast, Side, Back or Kidneys, bathe the parts affected morning and night; at the same time take a dose of the Panacea internally.

If a Mother has a caked breast, apply the Panacea as hot as it can be borne.

If you feel chilly or cold, as though you were going to have a fever, take a dose of Panacea.

If you have a wound, cut, or galls upon your horse, apply the Pain Panacea; it will take out all the inflammation and heal the sore in a short time.
